

artnet Magazine

HomeNewsReviewsFeaturesBooksPeopleHoroscopeNewsletter

Advertising

WEEKEND UPDATE

by Walter Robinson

Lan Tuazon's coffin at Apexart, with a projection by Michael Paul Britto on the rear wall

Other wacky stuff around town included an oddly shaped coffin at Apexart by Lan Tuazon, designed, according to the artist, so that she can be buried face down so God can kiss her ass! With its angles, it looks kind of Cubist. The sculpture was included in a show titled "Don't Get It Twisted! Violence Affects Everyone," organized by students from a "second chance" New York City public school called Satellite Academy. The young curators posted typewritten statements explaining their curatorial choices, and one hazarded that though she liked Acobe as an artist, she was confident that she would go to hell for her blasphemy.