

Bad at Sports (BaS) is a weekly podcast and daily blog produced in Chicago that features artists, arts writers, curators and other cultural practitioners talking about art and the community that participates in it. Founded in 2005 as a podcast by Duncan MacKenzie and Richard Holland the website has been expanded to include a blog, overseen by Meg Onli and Claudine Ise, that features news, interviews, editorials, and reviews. With its primary hub in Chicago, BaS is the midwest's most trafficked art blog, while the podcast has grown to become international in scope thanks to contributors stationed in San Francisco, New York City, London and Zurich. BaS's archive currently holds over 230 hours of audio interviews with arts professionals, while the blog contains hundreds of reviews and editorial essays on the subject of contemporary art in Chicago and beyond.

So, wait a minute, I thought Bad at Sports was a podcast and blog published by an artist collective – what in the hell is all of this stuff?

Indeed you are correct, we are a blog and podcast, but let me tell you we are so much more! This show is the first exhibition of our physical archive. We had already developed a large archive of audio interviews and writing, and we wanted to expand the possible methods of pursuing our mission of educating the public about the contemporary art landscape (flavored heavily with snarky humor). The goal was to collect objects, scraps, art, and bric-a-brac from the people we have worked with over the course of the past five years. We contacted all of the past participants and asked them to send us an artifact to memorialize our time together.

So while there is art in the show, it isn't really an art show, it is more of a gallery sized Wunderkammer, a cabinet of wonders. It is full of unusual objects, artworks, books, and bric-a-brac in and out of the donor's oeuvre.

Additionally this exhibition is the debut of a new project "You got questions, we'll get answers!". In tandem with our educational mission, we also strive to circumvent the dogmatic caste system that often exists in the art world. This project allows you to ask a question of the art universe, either specifically or generally. So if you want clarity as to the opaque method of submitting your work to galleries, or if you wonder if Jeff Koons is a vapid asshole or not, we will do the leg work and get you an answer.
